

The Catamount Adventure Park is going to celebrate its second year of operation by planning a friendly competition before the May 15th opening day. Since the park is intended purely for family recreation ages 8 and up (with adults outnumbering children by almost 3 to 1), we thought it important to allow only competitors in the course on this day of competition.

By invitation only, we have invited descendants of the Swiss family Robinsons and relatives of Rambo. The Ewok Villagers of Zimbabwe, which are considered by many to only be mythical folklore and fictional characters, are the third group to attend.

Spokespeople from each group have formed a committee and will finalize the date for the first week in May. Mr. Vanshure, Mr. Phun and Ariel (Ewoks prefer first names only) have been working very hard to put this together. When the Catamount Adventure Park is open to the public, no reservations are required. But this special event will require pre-registration, and the committee is still determining if substitutions will be allowed.

While Catamount's Adventure Park design was originally believed to have been created by Swiss engineers, it apparently had been a covert collaborative between the innovative design of the Ewoks and the Swiss engineers. The engineers of the Catamount Adventure Park have brilliantly retained the quaint feel of the Ewok village while adding the necessary safety standards required for configuring such a village on US soil. And the Ewoks are pleased that their creative talents will now be recognized and their lifestyle choices can be experienced worldwide.

Adventure Park rules have already been agreed upon. The Swiss family group have agreed to wear sneakers or appropriate footwear for safety, the Rambo camp have agreed to only use our standard issue safety harnesses with carabiners and to follow our rules requiring all participants to be safely attached at all times, and the Ewoks have agreed not to blow their loud horns out of respect for the village of South Egremont MA and nearby Connected that is only 15 miles away. As always, yodeling, giggling and battle cries (Commando course only) are acceptable.

Arial Parx, Ed Vanshure and Forest Phun all agree this will be an unbelievable event. Ariel did express concerns that credibility of this event may be jeopardized by releasing this announcement on the day of April Fools.
